

20 Most Frequently Asked Landlord-Tenant Questions

These 20 FAQs are provided by the Landlord-Tenant Commission and the City of Burbank so that residential landlords and tenants in the community are educated and knowledgeable of their legal roles, responsibilities and rights. Information and answers have been obtained from the California Tenants Handbook – A Guide to Residential Tenants’ and Landlords’ Responsibilities (CA Handbook). LEASES, RENTAL AGREEMENTS AND DOCUMENTATION

1. What is a lease or rental agreement and why is one important?

A lease (typically for one year) is a legal contract that a tenant and landlord are bound to until it expires. A rental agreement is typically month-to-month. Generally speaking, once a one year lease ends it turns into a month-to-month rental agreement. Both outline critical information such as monthly rent, security deposits, rent increases and tenant or landlord responsibilities, to name a few things. Most issues can be avoided by following the lease or rental agreement in place, and most questions can be answered by the lease or rental agreement. Leases and rental agreements are utilized by landlords to rent an apartment unit, house, duplex, Accessory Dwelling Units, condominium, or room. (CA Handbook pages 24-26, 28-31)

2. How often can rent be increased?

If there is a one-year lease, rent increases cannot be made until the expiration of the lease. If a tenant has a month-to-month rental agreement, a landlord has the right to increase the rent with proper days advance written notice and in an amount that follows the guidelines of Assembly Bill 1482 (AB1482). (CA Handbook pages 42-44, 48-51)

3. What is a sublease?

A sublease is a separate rental agreement between the original tenant and a new tenant who may move-in temporarily, or someone who moves in with the original tenant and shares the rent. In most leases, a sublease is not allowed. If a sublease is allowed and executed, the original tenant is still solely responsible for paying the rent to the landlord. (CA Handbook page 54)

4. Can a landlord change the terms of a lease/rental agreement?

A landlord can make changes to the lease agreement with proper notice or if the lease has a provision allowing the landlord to make changes. Proper notice is based on the term of the lease currently in effect (lease term examples: periodic lease, month to month lease or term lease). For example, if the rental agreement allows for rental increases, then the landlord may do so with proper advance written notice. Provisions allowing changes may include changes in use of parking, use of amenities or common areas. Changes can also be made at any time if both landlord and tenant are in agreement. (CA Handbook pages 16-18).

5. What are shared utilities?

If the utility meter for a rental unit is shared with another unit or another part of the building, then the landlord must reach an agreement with the tenant as to who will be paying for the shared utilities. This arrangement should be written in the lease agreement. (CA Handbook page 26)

6. Why is documentation important?

The Landlord-Tenant Commission recommends tenants enter into a written lease or rental agreement with their landlord. A lease or rental agreement should be seen as establishing a respectful business agreement between the two parties as most issues can be avoided with a proper lease or rental agreement. All parties, should keep that agreement on file for easy reference when questions arise, and both parties should maintain documentation on discussions, disputes, or all actions as explained later in this summary.

SECURITY DEPOSITS

7. When should a security deposit be refunded?

A landlord must mail or personally deliver a refund of a security deposit within 21 days. If a full refund is not remitted, an itemized statement that lists the amounts of any deductions from the security deposit and the reasons for the deductions (with copies of receipts) must be included. A landlord must inform the tenant of a “walk through” prior to move out to get an idea of any charges that may be deducted from the security deposit and to allow tenant sufficient time to remedy. (CA Handbook pages 81-84)

8. Can a security deposit be increased after moving in?

The law limits the total amount that the landlord can require a tenant to pay as a security deposit. The total amount depends on whether the rental unit is furnished (deposit could be tripled the current monthly rent) or unfurnished (deposit could be doubled the current monthly rent). (CA Handbook page 48)

9. Can a tenant use the security deposit for the last month's rent?

Some landlords will require last month's rent as part of the security deposit or at the time the security deposit is paid. If that is not the case, a tenant should review their lease or rental agreement to see if any portion of the security deposit may be used as the last month's rent (CA Handbook page 81).

10. What happens to the refund of a security deposit after the sale of a building?

When a building is sold, the selling landlord must do one of two things with the tenants' security deposit: (1) transfer the security deposits to the new landlord; or (2) return the security deposits to the tenants (with deductions as outlined in Number 8 of this Summary) following the sale. However, in the second scenario, the new landlord can and may collect new security deposits from the tenants. (CA Handbook pages 71-72, 93-95).

TERMINATION OF LEASE AND/OR EVICTION

11. When can a landlord end a tenancy?

A landlord can end a month-to-month tenancy by properly giving the tenant either 30 days or 60 days advance written notice. The notice given is dependent on various factors including length of tenancy in the unit. Thirty (30) days' notice is required if the tenant has lived in the rental unit for less than one year, and 60 days' notice is required if the tenant has lived in the unit for more than a year. However, a landlord may also issue a three-day eviction notice if the tenant has violated certain rules or obligations (CA Handbook pages 99-101).

REPAIR RESPONSIBILITY

12. When can a landlord enter the rental unit?

A landlord or the landlord's agent must give reasonable advance notice in writing before entering the unit and may only do so during normal business hours (8 AM to 5 PM, 7 days a week) unless otherwise agreed upon. California law considers 24 hours' notice to be reasonable. In an emergency, and other specific circumstances, advance written notice is not required. (CA Handbook pages 52-54)

13. Who is responsible for repairs?

The landlord is legally responsible for repairing conditions that affect the rental unit's habitability. Furthermore, the unit must comply with state and local building and health codes. On the other hand, tenants are solely responsible for the repair of damages and defects caused by themselves or their guests. The landlord is not responsible for repairs to a unit caused by the tenant or their guests. (CA Handbook pages 56-71)

14. Who can tenants contact if a rental unit has defects that are harmful to their health?

A landlord is required to rent a unit that is “habitable.” “Habitable” means that the rental unit is fit for occupancy by human beings and that it complies with state and local building and health codes . A tenant may contact the City of Burbank, Building Division at (818) 238-5280 for further information and help, and/or the Los Angeles County Health Department at (818) 557-4187. (CA Handbook pages 57-59)

15. What if a landlord is not responsive to a tenant’s needs?

If tenants have any complaints about the unit they occupy, it is important they document the complaint and make sure to communicate with the landlord both by telephone and in writing about the complaint(s). With this documentation, the tenant will have records of the complaints that may serve as evidence in the future if no action is taken towards resolving a tenant’s problem or concern.

HARASSMENT, RETALIATION AND DISCRIMINATION CONCERNS

16. What rights does a tenant have if a landlord is seeking retaliatory actions and/or is harassing?

If a tenant feels a landlord is retaliating or harassing them, the first step is to consult the CA Handbook. Key to any dispute is to maintain a comprehensive accounting of all retaliatory actions. Similarly, documentation of any incident of harassment is critical in order to prove potentially unlawful treatment. When documenting retaliation or harassment incidents, key components to include are: date, time, and place of incident; names, addresses, and phone numbers of those involved (including possible witnesses); and a detailed explanation of what occurred. While the information in the CA Handbook is helpful, the tenant may wish to seek the advice of an attorney or ask the Landlord-Tenant Commission for suggestions or help with mediation. (CA Handbook pages 121-123)

17. What rights does a tenant have in regards to unlawful discrimination by a landlord?

It is unlawful for a landlord, managing agent, real estate broker, or salesperson to discriminate against a person or harass a person because of the person’s race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, source of income, or disability. Furthermore, a landlord cannot discriminate on the basis of medical condition or age. If a tenant has been a victim of housing discrimination, there are several legal remedies. (CA Handbook pages 18-21)

FORECLOSURE AND LEGAL MATTERS

18. What happens if a tenant lives in a unit, which is to be sold in foreclosure?

Federal law now requires that a tenant be given 90-days written notice to vacate the unit. Under the 2009 “Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act,” a buyer of foreclosed property must honor the lease until the end of the lease term, unless the buyer will be moving in and using the property as the buyer’s home. This law is also true for tenants with Section 8 vouchers¹ (CA Handbook page 72).

19. What is an unlawful detainer lawsuit?

If a tenant does not voluntarily move out after their landlord has properly given the require notice, then the landlord can evict the tenant by filing an unlawful detainer lawsuit in Superior Court. An unlawful detainer lawsuit is meant to resolve an issue of eviction in a short period of time, which is why the tenant will usually have only five days to respond after being served with the summons (CA Handbook pages 107-120).
