City of Burbank Investment Portfolio Report for June 2024 Dated August 13, 2024

Dear City Council Members
Justin Hess, City Manager
Courtney Padgett, Assistant City Manager
Jennifer Becker, Financial Services Director
Joe Lillio, CFO Burbank Water & Power

This report fulfills City, Youth Endowment Services Fund, Parking Authority, Public Financing Authority, Successor Agency to the Redevelopment Agency and Housing Authority resolutions.

CITY PORTFOLIO OVERVIEW

The City must maintain $124 million in liquidity at all times (maturities within one year plus real estate taxes due from the County in April and December) to meet our projected budgeted expenditures. We currently have $288 million in liquidity, with $37 million in our account at the Morgan Stanley Institutional Liquidity Fund – Government Portfolio, $133 million in our account at the California Asset Management Program, $67 million in investments maturing within a year and $51 million in real estate taxes due in April and December.

The City Investment Pool ended June at $648 million, up from May's balance of $646 million. Market value came in at 97.4% in June, up from 97.1% in May. The weighted average yield of the portfolio at cost at the end of the month is 3.58% and the total rate of return at book value fiscal year-to-date is 3.36%.

Credit News

On August 2, S&P's placed Intel on negative credit watch, while keeping its rating at A-, stating that "the CreditWatch negative placement follows Intel's weaker-than-expected second-quarter financial performance and also reflects expected challenging business conditions in the second half of 2024. The company has outlined significant cost reductions by 2025; it plans to realign its headcount, reduce operating expenses, and make capital reductions amid weaker market demand. Intel will also suspend its dividend (annualized at about $2.2 billion) starting in the fourth quarter to preserve liquidity and support the investments needed to execute its strategy. While these cost-cutting measures, including significant capital expenditure reductions, could alleviate some near-term cash-flow-generation challenges, it is unclear whether these steps will be sufficient to maintain its business competitiveness and enable healthy growth."

On August 8, Moody's downgraded Intel's rating from A3 to Baa1, and changed its outlook from stable to negative, stating that it "reflects our expectations for Intel's significantly weaker profitability over the next 12 to 18 months resulting from a combination of higher costs related to product and manufacturing process technology transitions, unfavorable product mix, a weaker-than-expected demand in nearly all of its product segments, and continued market share losses. Concurrent with its 2Q '24 earnings, Intel announced a substantial cost restructuring, reductions in capital expenditures for 2024 and 2025, and plans to suspend its remaining common dividends. These actions will collectively yield more than $12 billion in cash savings in 2025, align the company's cost structure with its lowered near-to-medium term growth prospects, and mitigate the impact on financial leverage from lower revenues and profitability. The negative outlook considers elevated execution risk through 2027 when Intel expects its foundry segment to generate break-even operating profits and in the interim, there is limited visibility into gross margins of Intel's product group."

MARKET OUTLOOK

The labor market is showing signs of slowing down, with the US economy only adding 114,000 jobs in July, less than forecasted, and one of the smallest gains in 43 months. Job gains were also concentrated in just a few sectors, with most industries showing flat numbers as employers are reluctant to hire. In certain sectors such as information technology, job losses continue as businesses take the opportunity to cut costs. However, overall layoffs throughout the economy remain low, and initial jobless claims remain lower than expected. The unemployment rate now stands at 4.3%, the highest since October 2021. However, this growth is primarily due to an increase in the number of people looking for work. The labor force participation rate has also climbed, with 84% of those in their prime working years now active in the labor market.

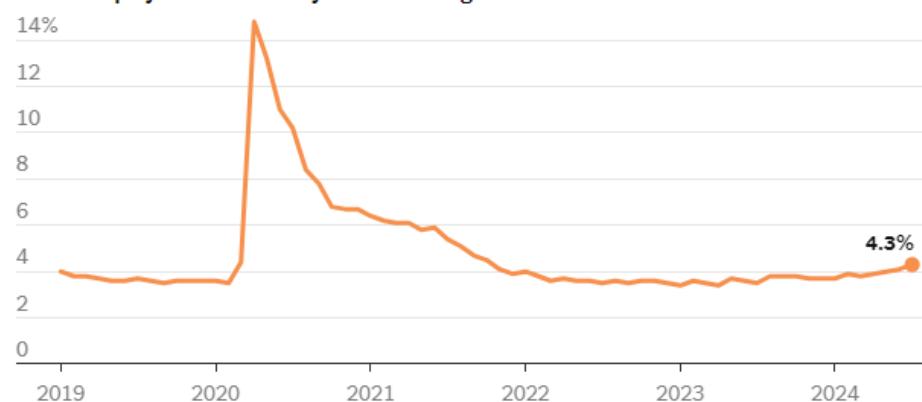

GDP growth for Q2 2024 was solid at 2.8% annualized. The Fed's preferred inflation gauge, the Personal Consumption Index also continues to moderate, coming in at 2.5% in June. However, businesses are reporting that consumers have become cautious and have begun cutting back as they are increasingly weighed down by the significant price increases of recent years. Credit card delinquencies and household debt have increased. Personal saving as a percentage of disposable personal income decreased to 3.4% in June. Although businesses report that consumers are still spending, people are now looking for ways to economize – eating out less, trading down to lower cost items, and shopping around more. Given worries of an economic downturn, investors now widely expect the Fed to cut rates in their upcoming September meeting, possibly even 50 bps. Last month, Fed Chair Powell reiterated the need for more data that inflation has been eradicated, saying “if we do get the data that we hope, then a reduction in our policy rate could be on the table at the September meeting.” He also said, “it’s going to be inflation data, it’s going to be the employment data, it’s going to be the balance of risks as we see it — it’s going to be the totality of all of that. I can imagine a scenario in which there would be everywhere from zero cuts to several cuts, depending on the way the economy evolves.”

The number of jobs added in July was the second smallest monthly gain in years.
